Summer party planning using 'green' flowers

If you're planning an outdoor party this summer, petite-size whimsical centerpieces are fun, easy to create, and fairly inexpensive.

Whenever I can, I use fresh flowers from VeriFlora, which are certified sustainably grown flowers. The program was established to provide stringent standards for growers and cut flower handlers; controlling pests and diseases with the least amount of impact to the environment, conserving water, greenhouse gas reduction efforts, and supporting the local community are just a few key points that meet VeriFlora's criteria.

When purchasing flowers look for the VeriFlora label on the floral sleeve, or if you're planning a 'green' wedding, request Veriflora flowers when ordering from your florist. Many florist wholesalers provide VeriFlora flowers.

For a recent 'green' pool party, I made twelve small, lush and simple centerpieces with a recession-friendly budget. The centerpieces are also perfect for a birthday party, luncheon or small corporate event.

To make the small hand-tied bouquets 'pop,' I used hot pink hydrangea surrounded by mini 'green' hydrangeas. Petite galvanized French buckets finished off the casual and rustic look. A touch of purple ribbon added a bit of whimsy.

Hydrangeas will suffer in direct sunlight and extreme humidity. For outdoor parties, be sure to place flowers under umbrellas or a tent. The petite French designs make perfect guest giveaways as well.

Kate (@Thegreenbrideguide.com) says:

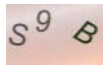

These are lovely arrangements! I am actually interviewing Gerald Prolman, who founded Organic Bouquet and who helped form the VeriFlora standards, in a couple of weeks. The interview will be posted on my site and will also be available through the Center for Business and The Environment at Yale - should be interesting. VeriFlora offers an important step in the transition to Organic. I am glad you support it!
